INTRODUCTION

NEW YORK, February 28, 1913.

Many years ago, on leaving the Department of State, having experienced great difficulty in finding a particular document or reference, I collected the documents published by Congress during a series of years and arranged a complete chronological series of public documents relating to foreign affairs and diplomatic relations, covering a very considerable period.

Some years afterwards, the collection having been presented to the New York Public Library (Astor, Lenox, and Tilden Foundations) was brought down to the year 1900, under the intelligent advice of the late Dr. John S. Billings, then Director of the Library. The earlier documents were also collected, so as to form what is believed to be almost a complete collection from the earliest history of the government to 1907. The collection proved of large value to students in the Public Library, but the absence of an index greatly diminished its practical value, and, so much work having been done, I determined to cause an index to be made.

It was originally intended that the index should cover the years 1789 to date, but when some progress had been made it became evident that to do this thoroughly would require a long time, and, as the Folio American State Papers (Foreign Affairs), which cease in 1828, have fair indexes, and as an index to the annual Diplomatic Correspondence which begins in 1861 had lately been published by the State Department, it was determined to prepare a thorough index, to completely cover the period from 1828 to 1861.

The index assumes, within the period named, to afford to the student reference to the entire published record of documents, papers, correspondence and, to a considerable extent, legislation and decisions upon international or diplomatic questions; and by its use it is hoped that persons making researches into diplomatic history may now find their labors lightened.

The preparation of the index has been carried on under the intelligent and conscientious direction of Miss Adelaide R. Hasse, the head of the Department of Documents in the New York Public Library. An explanation by Miss Hasse of the character and scope of the index will be found on the following page.

JOHN L. CADWALADER.

EXPLANATORY NOTE

The plan of the present index makes it, perhaps, expedient that some word of explanation should precede the work proper.

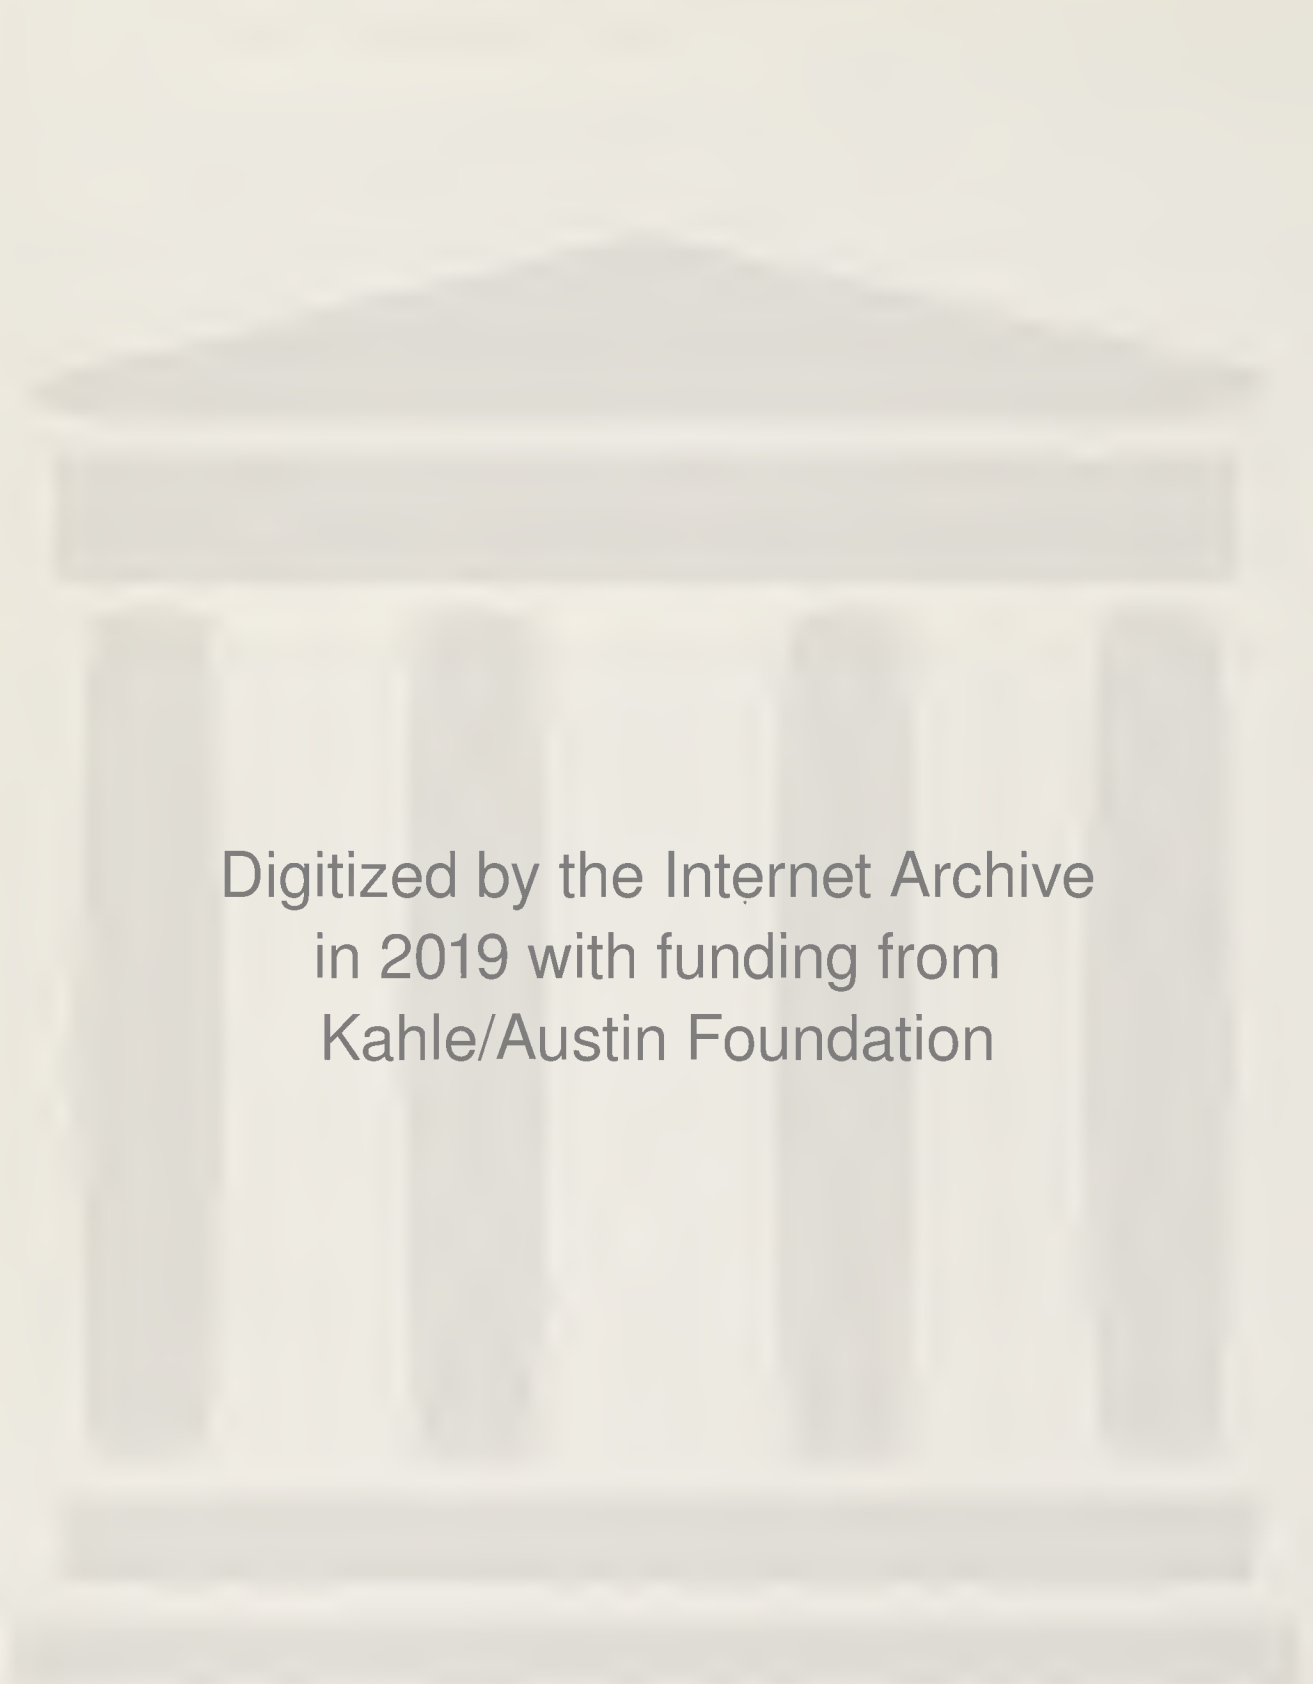

The material relating to diplomatic controversy contained in the printed papers of both Houses of Congress, practically includes only that presented pursuant to call of Congress. To have confined the index within these lines would have made but a partial representation of that which actually exists. In order, therefore, to assemble the material with a reasonable degree of completeness, the following series of documents, in addition to the reports of Congress, have been indexed, viz.; the Senate Executive Journal, for diplomatic and consular appointments and treaty ratifications; the Opinions of the Attorneys General, for decisions on questions of international controversy; the Statutes-at-Large, for acts and resolutions relating to international affairs; and the Congressional Globe and its predecessors for speeches and correspondence. The text of the latter, it was found, does not always correspond with the text as printed in the House and Senate documents.

The assembled material comprised within the various series referred to above is arranged in one alphabet in the aspect made familiar by the ordinary library catalogue. Every correspondent, petitioner, memorialist or deponent is credited with an entry under personal name for each letter written, each petition or memorial presented and each deposition made. Each such letter, petition, or memorial is then again distributed under the subject indicated by the nature of its contents. Regarding the distribution of letters under various subjects the method has been not to reproduce the entire précis under all the subjects of the letter, but only that portion of the précis relating to each subject. Thus, Marcy to Sartiges on July 28, 1856, in stating the American objections to the Declaration of Paris, does so first in general terms, then particularly in regard to privateering, and finally proposes a modification of the accepted doctrine of contraband. Under Contraband in the index is entered only the précis of that portion of the letter relating to that subject. The sentence of the précis is not finally closed by a period, but left open with a semi-colon and the abbreviation, " etc.," to show that the purport of the letter is other than contraband. The entire purport is entered under Marcy. The individual entry under personal name consists of the date, name and title of addressee, précis of contents, and a reference to the place or places where the letter, etc., may be found. The arrangement of these individual entries is chronological. In the case of the diplomatic or consular correspondence of the United States, the despatch number has been added and also a statement to show whether the letter briefed is an extract or whether it is the entire document. By means of the omissions in the despatch numbers it is possible to collate the continuity of the printed correspondence, and, by means of the collected extracts, it has been possible frequently to present all the parts of a document severally printed in various places.

The student, unfamiliar with manner of publication of the official correspondence, is occasionally baffled, and possibly even deprived entirely of needed material. The present form of the index, after some experiment, was retained, as resulting in the most satisfactory redemption of this correspondence from practical unavailability.

AMING, CHINAMAN; DEPONENT IN CASE OF THOS. HUNT AND CO.; see HUNTAMISTAD, SPAN. SCHR.

On Je. 27, 1839, Amistad cleared at Havana for Puerto Principe, having on board besides the capt. and owner, a slave Antonio, property of the capt., and two passengers, Ruiz and Montez, Span. subjects. The cargo consisted of 53 negroes, owned in part by Ruiz and Montez. On the voyage the negroes revolted, killed the capt. and took possession of the vessel. The Amistad was finally seized by Capt. Sedney, Amer. brig Washington, off Montauk Point and taken to port of New London. 39 of the mutineers were committed to trial in Conn. Judge U. S. circ. ct. refused case as without jurisdiction of ct., crime having been committed on Span. vessel on high seas. Release of negroes was refused as they were property held under libel filed Sept., 1839, by U. S. distr. atty. Court rejected claims of alleged owners for restoration of negroes, but decreed that they should be delivered to President of U. S. A. for transportation to Africa. Supreme Ct., on appeal, modified the decree (16 Peters, 518). Subsequently owners made application to govt. of U. S. A. for losses sustained through alleged failure of U. S. A. to comply with treaty of 1795.

Boundary Negotiations: Costa Rica-Nicaraguan

See also below, Webster-Crampton agreement.

a. Sovereignty of San Juan river; b. of terr. of Guanacaste, or Nicoya.

a. San Juan River Sovereignty, etc.

Costa Rican claim: Right of dominion over all country lying on so. bank of river from Atlantic ocean to Lake of Nicaragua, and on that part of aforesaid lake comprised between Fort San Carlos and river La Flor, and right to joint navigation of San Juan river and of Lake of Nicaragua.

Nicaraguan claim: Denies validity of Costa Rican claim and maintains counter-claim of exclusive control over above mentioned territories, river and lake.

b. Guanacaste

Guanacaste, or Nicoya, territory lying between Lake Nicaragua and the Pacific. Boundary claimed by Costa Rica extended from Tortuga Point on the lake to the no. point of Salinas Bay on the ocean. Nicaragua claimed line from Fort San Carlos on the lake, skirting so. boundary of the lake, and ending in so. point of S. Elena Bay on the ocean. District between the two lines comprised Guanacaste terr., jurisdiction over which was claimed both by Costa Rica and by Nicaragua.

1849 Je. 23. Spec. comr. from Nicaragua to Gr. Br. (Castellón) to Secy. H. B. M. Foreign Office (Palmerston). Supporting his contention that port of San Juan is Nicaraguan property and representing that Gr. Br. cannot justly intervene to secure payment of arrears due on bonds of Central Amer. (31. 1. CHARLES, AMER. SCHR. (STOVER)

The Charles was boarded by H. B. M. brig Argus in Shelburne harbor, coast of Nova Scotia, on May 10, 1823, for alleged infringement of act 59 Geo. III, ch. 28, passed in conformity with stipulation of convention betw. U. S. and Gr. Br. of Oct 20, 1818. The schr. was sent to St. Johns, N. B., where she arrived May 20, and was reported for libelling. On the 21st she was manned by a Br. crew and sent down the bay after smugglers. While thus irregularly employed she captured one Amer. vessel, the Dolphin. On Je. 7 the Charles was given up to the collector of customs in St. John's for legal adjudication. The Br. govt. ordered that any vessel captured by the Charles while irregularly employed in Br. service should be restored to her owners, although liable on other grounds to be condemned.

Claims on China

AMERICAN

Claims for losses sustained by Amer. citizens in consequence of hostilities betw. the English and Chinese at Canton, and by the burning of the factories at Canton in Dec., 1856.

For synopsis see Moore. Int. Arbitration, 4627; see also below, Foreign Negotiations, 1858. Oct.-Nov., Shanghai.

On Nov. 8, 1858, the Amer. comr. in China, Reed, signed a conv. accepting the sum of half a million taels in settlement of claims for destruction of Amer. property at Canton in 1858. The sum was to accrue out of duties collected on Amer. goods and bottoms at three ports of Canton, Shanghai and Foo Chow, the collectors being authorized to issue debentures.
